Player 3

the youngest, and the curious one

Six Characters in Search of an Author

Sei personaggi in cerca d'autore · Pirandello, trans. Storer 1922

A Village Players production · Lausanne

Director: Kiarash Jamshidi

32 SPEECHES · 366 WORDS ACROSS THE PLAY

WHO PLAYER 3 IS

Player 3 may be played by a young man or a young woman — the part is written for either. These notes use they; the director should settle on the pronoun that fits the actor cast, and adjust the few stage directions that carry it.

Carries the Juvenile Lead, the Prompter, An Actor, and the Fifth Actor. In their early twenties — the youngest in the company by a good ten years. First proper season at the Village Players, after a few small parts last year and a drama school in Geneva that they still mention when they are nervous. They are not yet sure whether they are an actor or a person who is currently acting. They are also, without question, the happiest person in the building — they still cannot quite believe they are being paid (a little) to spend their evenings inside a theatre — and they do a bit of everything: prompt from the box, read the small parts, help strike the set, run for the props nobody else will fetch. No job is beneath them, because all of it is theatre, and theatre is the thing they love. The audience reads their age the moment they enter: the body is younger, the listening is sharper, the eyes track the older two to learn what one does.

Their dominant register is curious. Where Player 1 has opinions and Player 2 has shoulders, Player 3 has questions. When the Six arrive they are the first to take them seriously — not because they believe the Father's philosophy, but because they have never seen a rehearsal interrupted in this way and they want to know what happens. They lean forward. They nod. They catch themselves nodding and try to stop. The other two notice; they colour. The notebook is their tell: they write everything down — lines, phrases, things they do not yet understand but suspect they are meant to keep — and the moment they stop writing is the moment the play has stopped being a curiosity and become something they would rather not have on record.

The arc to score: in Act One they are enthralled by the strangers and slightly embarrassed by their own enthrallment — the one Player who will say out loud that the Father means every word, and the one who lets slip, when nervous, the drama school in Geneva they have not yet stopped mentioning. In Act Two they watch the shop-scene replay and stop nodding; the pencil goes still. By Act Three they are the Player who has understood the play the company has stumbled into — the conscience who asks whether someone should stop this, and waits, and is not answered. Their face is the audience's mirror at every horror in the second half.

They play four roles. The Juvenile Lead is eager and slightly ridiculous — they have been told they have "stage presence" and have heard it as promise. The Prompter is them in a wooden box, frowning at the draught and the shorthand, pleased to be useful, faintly aware they are too young for the role and trying to compensate with seriousness. An Actor and the Fifth Actor are functions: someone has to read a line. They read them clean, no pretension, and look to Player 2 to check they did it right.

The casting note for the audition room: the actor — of any gender — must be young enough that the age difference reads from the back row, and a sharp enough listener that the company's whole second half can be tracked on their face. The audience must believe both that this is the youngest person in the room and that they are the one who understands soonest what the company has stumbled into. That is the role's range.

THE PLAY, AND HOW IT BEGINS

What it is. Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author (1921). A theatre company's ordinary rehearsal is interrupted by six figures — a Father, a Mother, a Step-Daughter, a Son, and two silent children — who claim to be unfinished Characters, abandoned by their author, and demand that their drama be staged. The evening is the collision between their fixed, unbearable story and a working company's attempt to turn it into theatre.

This production. Set in Lausanne, played by nine live performers with two stage objects in place of the two youngest children (a coat-and-chair for the Boy, a wrapped bundle for the Child), on three stripped settings — no projection, no screen. One interval, after Act One; the second half plays unbroken to the fountain.

How it opens. The curtain is already up on a half-lit working stage. The Village Players are dragging themselves into a rehearsal of another Pirandello play, Mixing It Up — the Manager arrives tired and behind, there is the business of the cook's cap, the Players bicker. Then the working lights soften to a strange amber: the Door-keeper carries in the Boy-chair, and the four family Characters walk on, the Step-Daughter already holding the Child-bundle. From that entrance the play has begun, and it does not let go.

HOW TO READ THIS BOOK

Everything this role says and does, in performance order, grouped by act and by part. Each speech is preceded by a short CUE — the tail of the line before it — so you can find your entrance. Where the role doubles a function, the function is printed beside the line (as Prompter, and so on); chorus lines the company speaks together keep their group tag (All Three Players). Blocking lives in the bracketed action cues inside the speeches. The text is pulled byte-for-byte from the Director's Copy, so it always matches the current script.

Act One

PART I The Rehearsal

3 SPEECHES · 77 WORDS

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): ... public came back for the third act once. I was in it.

PLAYER 3 (as Prompter) [reading the "book"]: "Leo Gala's house. A curious room serving as dining-room and study."

CUE Player 2 (as Property Man): Red set. Same flats as the blue room. I'll turn them round.

PLAYER 3 (as Prompter) [reading from the "book"]: "When the curtain rises, Leo Gala, dressed in cook's cap and apron is busy beating an egg in a cup. Philip, also dressed as a cook, is beating another egg. Guido Venanzi is seated and listening."

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): Let the record show that I wear it under protest.

PLAYER 3 (as Prompter): Pardon, sir — may I get into my box? There's a draught off that door they still haven't mended, and I'd rather not be hoarse for my first proper season.

PART II The Plea

13 SPEECHES · 190 WORDS

CUE The Step-Daughter: ... us on tonight — we'll draw better than whatever you were rehearsing.

PLAYER 3 [coming forward from the others]: Oh — do you hear that?

CUE The Father: ... woman. So one may also be born a character in a play.

PLAYER 3 [softly, to Player 2]: Sorry — is this still the rehearsal?

CUE Player 2 (as Leading Lady): ... all down, and we'll work out later which half was the play.

PLAYER 3 [doing exactly that, in a small notebook]: I am writing it all down. I've got "born a character in a play." I don't know what it means yet — but it seemed like the sort of thing one is meant to keep.

CUE The Father: No, sir, only for a moment... in you.

PLAYER 3. Just listen to him. Honestly — just listen. I came in for a Tuesday rehearsal, and there is a man on our stage who means every word he says. When did anyone here last mean a word?

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): Speak for yourself. I have room.

PLAYER 3 (as Juvenile Lead) [pointing to the STEP-DAUGHTER]: I've no objection, as far as that one is concerned!

CUE The Step-Daughter: ... I can dance and sing. Don't worry — it isn't a hymn.

ALL THREE PLAYERS. Bravo! Well done! Encore!

CUE The Father: Quick, a chair, a chair for this poor widow!

ALL THREE PLAYERS. Is it true? Has she really fainted?

CUE Player 2 (as Leading Lady): We are the audience this time.

PLAYER 3 [quietly, the pencil not moving]. For once. [Nobody laughs.]

CUE The Father: ... and you hear another? We think we understand. We never really do.

PLAYER 3 [a whisper to Player 1]. I understood words. I'm fairly confident about words.

CUE The Manager: Of course, of course; but let's hear them out.

PLAYER 3 (as Juvenile Lead) [the most earnest of the three, genuinely curious]. This is something quite new. I have not seen anything quite like this before.

CUE Player 3 (as Juvenile Lead): ... something quite new. I have not seen anything quite like this before.

PLAYER 3 [dropping the role, lower, to Player 2 — nervous, fast]. We did Pirandello at the school in Geneva. Two scenes, in a basement, badly. I keep thinking — this is what it was supposed to feel like, and nobody ever told us.

CUE The Father: ... is the way we tell each other: blind yourself, because I have.

PLAYER 3 [low, to Player 1]. Is anyone else following this? At all?

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): ... I am nodding, and so should you. Nodding is half the craft.

PLAYER 3 [nodding — then catching themselves nodding, and stopping]. I'm following some of it. I'm just not sure I want to follow the rest. That's new for me as well.

PART III The Bargain

3 SPEECHES · 15 WORDS

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): ... six strangers into his office and left us standing here like furniture.

PLAYER 3 (as Juvenile Lead). They are not ordinary strangers.

CUE Player 2: He once staged the Nativity in fifteen.

PLAYER 3. Perhaps there is a play.

CUE Player 1 (as Door-keeper): They looked expected.

PLAYER 3 (as Prompter). Am I taking this down?

Act Two

PART I Backstage

7 SPEECHES · 27 WORDS

CUE The Son: ... apart from that idea of father and mother which we give them?

PLAYER 3 [very quietly, the pencil gone still in their hand]. Mon Dieu. I've stopped writing it down. I don't want a record of this one.

CUE The Manager: ... I'm going to ask you to do something out of the ordinary.

PLAYER 3 (as Prompter) [looking up from the book; an unusual request to receive at this hour]. Take it down in shorthand? Sir — in shorthand?

CUE The Manager: Exactly! Can you do shorthand?

PLAYER 3 (as Prompter). Yes, a little.

CUE The Father: ... be so good as to give me their hats for a moment...

ALL THREE PLAYERS [half surprised, half laughing, in chorus].

CUE The Father: ... the ladies will be so kind as to take off her mantle...

ALL THREE PLAYERS.

TWO PLAYERS.

CUE The Father: ... them up here for a moment. Please be so kind, will you?

ALL THREE PLAYERS [taking off their hats, one or two also their cloaks, and going to hang them on the racks].

PART II The Apparition

2 SPEECHES · 18 WORDS

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): What's going to happen next? Have we lost the script entirely?

PLAYER 3 (as Juvenile Lead). Where does she come from? Not from the SSA list, I can tell you that.

CUE Player 1 (as Leading Man): What does she say? Madame — speak up.

PLAYER 3 (as Juvenile Lead). Louder! Louder please!

PART III The Substitution

PLAYER 3 DOES NOT SPEAK IN THIS PART.

Act Three

PART I The Argument over Reality

PLAYER 3 DOES NOT SPEAK IN THIS PART.

PART II The Refusal

1 SPEECH · 20 WORDS

CUE The Father: ... life. We've all tried him in turn — I, she and she.

PLAYER 3 [to no one in particular — the youngest voice in the room]. Should we — should someone — stop this? I keep waiting for one of you to say that we should. [No one does.]

PART III The Fountain

3 SPEECHES · 19 WORDS

CUE The Son: What do you want?

PLAYER 3 (as Juvenile Lead). Nothing! I was just looking at you.

CUE The Manager: Is he really wounded?

TWO PLAYERS. He's dead! dead!

CUE Two Players: He's dead! dead!

THE OTHER PLAYERS. No, no, it's only make believe, it's only pretence!
